Walk-around with an idiot An exhibition by Fabrice PICHAT

It's to a sensitive, illusionist, and a-reflexive walk-around that invites us Fabrice Pichat in Triangle.

Wishing that we strip from the reflexes conditioning our approach to sensible and its apprenticeship, he proposes us to become, the time of the show, true idiots who could, like the eponymous character of Dostoiewski, adress any situation as virgin from the handicap of experience.

From floating objects to absent objects, distorted if not invisibles, the work of Fabrice Pichat asserts the existentialist potential of objects, became resistants to a unique perception and bearers of an enlarged vision of the world, for who is willing to depart from one's array of civilized man to be walked-around, the time of the show, by an idiot...
